HOW MAUI'S $100,000 INVESTMENT LOOKS

Exposed Piping Buckles---Few Breaks---Looks Odd,
But Will Still Be Useful.

The work of laying miles and miles of water pipe for the Kula district has been going on merrily for sometime, and prompted partly by curiosity and partly by stories that are being carried about concerning said work, a representative of the Maui News made a thirty mile trip on horseback last Sunday, for an actual look at the $100,000 improvement, and to get first hand information of what is going on and what has taken place.

In several places on the six-inch section, between Waiakoa and Olinda, it had been reported the pipes had buckled, twisted and had broken from no apparent cause at all, except that the sections had been joined together by Contractor Landgraf. The breaks happened where the piping were laid across ravines and had been repaired in a way, so the foreman of the section gang said, that would preclude further breaks. Probably his predecessor had as much faith in his own work, but the forces of nature are beyond us and, with conditions unchanged the pipe exposed to the noon heat of the sun and the chill airs of the night, who can say it will not happen again?

That a long section of heavy inanimate six-inch piping could buckle and twist like a thing of life in response to the laws of nature was quite incredible, and in itself was an impressive lesson in natural science.

Usually one's impression of a pipe line running over miles of country would be that of a straight line like that formed by the rails of a railway, but the real pipe line, at least the Kula pipe line, is not. Originally it had lain in a straight line but sun heat and the chill of night had forced it to expand and contract so that a twist to the right followed a twist to the left in regular succession over miles of piping.

At one place, on the five-inch section, the pipe line ran syphon like down one side across the bottom and up the other side of a wide ravine finally crossing the roadway to disappear in a green field of growing corn. Across the bottom of the ravine it was held above ground on some shaky wooden making a curve to the right and, after crossing a small ridge in the middle of the ravine, where the piping lay in a small trench, it balanced off the first curve with a similar one to the left.

Experts in civil engineering work say this buckling and twisting will keep right on until water flows through the pipe which will then tend to keep it cool and prevent further bending and buckling. Although to the eye the buckling of the piping looks odd, yet in fact, the actual damage, if any, will be very small, no greater than what should be allowed for breaks or wear and tear from usage.

From Waiakoa to Olinda the six inch piping will be buried in trenches, and, except where laid across the numerous dry ravines, will be protected from weather effects, but from Waiakoa to Ulupalakua the piping will be exposed on top of the ground.

Probably within thirty days Contractor Landgraf will be through with his work. But the laying of the wooden stave piping from the intake to Olinda has not yet begun, in fact tenders for that work is being advertised to be handed in July 30th, so at least, it will be between four and six months before water could be conducted through the water mains laid by Contractor Landgraf in the Kula district. And in the meantime until the water begins to flow through the pipes they will buckle and twist, as a resident of Kula said, buckle and lift itself a foot off the ground between morning and noon, and repeat the operation almost daily, let alone its twisting from one side to the other like an uneasy fretful thing.

The work of laying the remainder of the piping is progressing satisfactorily under the conditions, averaging about 1,500 feet daily, and Contractor Landgraf maintains that, but for the delay in delivering the piping on the line, he could push the work ahead faster and finish it sooner. The piles of piping lying besides the government road towards the Ulupalakua end of the line seem to favor his contention.

The contractor has laid or joined all of the six inch piping, except less than five thousand feet at the Pulehu section of the line. All of the five inch piping has been connected from Waiakoa to Waiohuli, the Keokea section is still in the hands of the workmen, and a mile or so of the Kamaole section has been connected. With smaller piping, no deep gulches to cross and better ground, the work of connecting the piping towards Ulupalakua and Kanaio could, by putting on another gang, proceed much more rapidly than on the sections already completed.

While the buckling and bending of the piping has caused unfavorable comment still the damage that may be caused to the exposed piping by changes in temperature will be no greater than the effect of water pressure in said piping when the flood gates are opened and the waters of Koolau shall eventually be flowing through the twenty miles or so of piping within the next four or six months at the latest.

Mormons Are Favoring Prohibition.

Sunday last the Church of the Latter Day Saints had a Sunday school celebration at Waiehu, and, at the conclusion of the exercises, a number of the Maui Prohibition League speakers were allowed to address the gathering of over 300 people. Six young Mormon elders strongly supported the prohibition speakers and advised their people to vote for prohibition.

At the conclusion of their addresses Senator Coelho, who was present, got into a controversy with one of the elders over the prohibition issue until the senator got hot. He then told the natives that these young Mormon elders from Utah were a lot of wayward boys at home, whose parents had shipped them out here to get rid of them, and to keep them away from evil influences and temptations at home, and to enable them to get over their bad habits.

The Senator further advised the Hawaiians to get rid of these haole youngsters, and not to support them or listen to them and their pernicious doctrines.

The Kailua Convention

Missionaries Arrival Commemorated With S. one Arch.

One of the most remarkable gatherings in Hawaiian history was held at Kailua the last past of last month. It was the eighty-eighth annual session of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, which commemorated the ninetyeth anniversary of the landing of the first band of missionaries on these Islands.

A large number of delegates and pastors were present from all parts of the Territory, and there were probably as many as six hundred people in attendance at the meetings each day. The Inter Island Steamship Company was considerate of the large crowd that had to be handled, and provided the Kinan on the outward trip from Honolulu and the Maui on the return trip in addition to regular boats.

The entertainment committee, of which Rev. Stephen Desha was the chairman, did exceptionally well in handling such a big crowd. Abundance of the best kind of food was provided for all who came to the meeting. An immense lanai was constructed under the direction of Rev. E. S. Timoteo, where the majority of the delegates had their meals. The English speaking contingent was cared for in royal style by Mrs. J. C. Robinson in the beautiful dining room of the palace.

The exercises began on Saturday with an address of welcome by Rev. Dr. A. S. Baker. In the name of the old missionaries, whose houses were still standing near the Church, in the name of the many in the past who had helped in the work in Hawaii, and in the name of the present members of the old Kailua Church, he bade the guests welcome. We are very much in doubt if an able welcoming speech were ever made at the opening of the annual session of the Association. Rev. W. B. Olsen in an excellent address gave the key note for the whole of the meetings. He spoke of the early evangelism and the need today of earnestness and enthusiasm for the cause of temperance.

Fifteen hundred people were present at the memorial exercises on Sunday, when the handsome Memorial Arch was dedicated. The arch was made out of the stone near the old church, and is a substantial memorial to the missionary fathers, Opukahaia and his companions. The speeches of Rev. Messrs. Desha, Gulick and Oleson were full of unusual interest.

The key note of the six days of meeting was the coming question of whether or not liquor shall be manufactured and sold in the Territory of Hawaii. Contrary to the false report in one of the Honolulu papers that Prohibition had not many supporters at this great convention, it can be truthfully said by those who are thoroughly conversant with the entire session at Kailua that of the hundreds of people there, all but a handful were solidly for Prohibition. Those who were not with the majority were for liquor, they claimed, largely for political reasons. The speeches in favor of Prohibition by Messrs. Desha, Nakuina, Magoon, and others were remarkable pieces of oratory not only, but were made of the solidest kinds of argument, so that those who dared to say a word on the liquor side of the question admitted that they were worsted in argument. In fact, those present at Kailua, who have attended similar conferences in the States and elsewhere, pronounced the Kailua Convention one of unusual force and earnestness. For the cosmopolitan spirit and their determination to succeed, we doubt if this convention could be equalled in the last decade of great religious gatherings in America.

New Plan for Schools

Supervising Principals to be Appointed Teachers for Maui

A centralization scheme was outlined in a report on a plan for better supervision of the public schools of the Territory, made to the Commissioners by Superintendent Pope.

The new system is considered generally to be an improvement on the old, both from an economic and utility standpoint. A saving in actual money and a general cooperation of work is expected to be obtained at the same time.

The Islands, under the new system, will be divided into educational districts. The first of these is formed of Kauai and Niihau containing seventeen schools and sixty-nine teachers to be in charge of a supervising principal who will also be the principal of one of the schools.

The second will be Oahu, with seventeen schools and forty-eight teachers, supervision in charge of the superintendent assisted by the Normal Inspector.

The third will be Maui, Molokai and Lanai, containing thirty-nine schools and eighty-two teachers. One supervising principal is to report regularly on all the schools in this district, making visits to Molokai and Lanai once or twice each term to lay out work and give assistance. The Lahaina Normal Seminary is not included.

The fourth is East Hawaii--Haukapu, Hilo and Puna--containing twenty-seven schools and sixty teachers. One supervising principal also to be a regular principal of one of the schools of the district, is to make regular visits and reports on his district's work.

Mr. Vincent was granted his life certificate and the following requests were also granted under the head of new business.

Miss F. K. Bindt, a life diploma; Miss Alice Winter, a grammar grade certificate, on her credentials; Mrs. C. O. Hottel, a life certificate; Mrs. Ida Knight, a life diploma; and Katherine McIntyre, a life certificate. The commissioners also accepted the certificate of Miss A. L. Arms.

All the requests for vacations were granted.

Requests for additional teachers in schools in all islands were discussed at length. It was shown that they are needed in probably one-third of the schools but that the commissioners so far have found no way in which they can be added. In some there is no room and finances are such that they can not be stretched over to make appointments for all applications. Probably six or ten teachers can be appointed but the commissioners will have to wait until the payroll for the coming year is completed.

There has been some doubt as to the status of the holidays usually observed in some manner by the schools and this matter was threshed out at length yesterday.

The following were denoted as holidays during which the schools are to close: Labor Day, if during school time; Thanksgiving, Washington's Birthday, Good Friday, Decoration Day and Kamehameha Day. The holidays to be observed on the school premises are Arbor Day, Lincoln's Birthday, May Day and Flag Day.

Teachers selected for Maui and Molokai: Olowalu--W. K. Hoopii. Lahaina--Mrs. Nora Gannon, Miss Tenlan Choy, Mrs. L. K. Furtado, Miss A. Hose.
